Clarence Prest Tells of Disastrous Flight.

Dawson, Y. T., July 22.—(By the Associated Press.) — Clarence O. Prest, the Clinton (Iowa) aviator, while attempting a flight across Yukon territory and Alaska, flew with his moving ploture camera above a great herd of caribou and was forced to land in their midst. The herd is part of the great body of caribou which annually trek across the region near Dawson and Eagle. Prest had flown by a round-about way from San Bernardino, Calif., to the far north.

His own story of his experience is told in a dispatch from Eagle to the Dawson Daily News:

Emporia, Kan., July 22—The controversy between the two bosom friends, and closest of chums, Governor Henry J. Allen and William Allen White, will be a distinct factor in the Kansas primaries on Aug. 3, politicians deciared today. That was the outstanding development today of a situation that has created mirth everywhere in Kansas and which promises to keep the state laughing for some time to come. But whether as a result there also will come an end to the extremely friendly relations between the two editors is a subject that is causing serious comment.

For years the pair have been the closest of friends. It did not take White's book, "The Martial Adventures of Henry and Me" to show this. Above their desks hang autographed photographs. On that framed above White's chair is the inscription, "To a sincere true friend, Henry J. Allen," while on the corresponding likeness, hung where it, is in easy view from where the governor conducts his various tasks are these words "To whom where the governor conducts his various tasks are these words "To whom where the governor conducts his various tasks are these words "To where the same is a politician—and every white, the politician—and every white the programs of a character are forbidden during the actacter are forbidden during the progress of a strike.
